When designing new offices, we have a range of inhouse teams including Design Engineers for designing bespoke products, Survey Analysts for assessing your space, and Storage Analysts for evaluating your storage requirements. ## storage surveys

The paperless office has still yet to arrive, and storing your paper files is as important than ever. Effective storage ensures staff know what is digital or analogue, making it quick and easy to retrieve files. High-capacity storage units will minimise the footprint used and free up valuable floor space, reducing costs and leaving room for more agile workspaces.

Our storage survey teams will survey and evaluate how much storage is required per department, who needs access, the type of storage required, and which internal storage components will be most effective. This information is given to our Space Planning team, who will design the correct office space, ensuring each department gets the right storage solution, which in turn improves efficiency, saves on floor space, ultimately saving money.

interior design & space planning

Our in-house Interior Design and Space Planning teams use the latest 3D planning software to create level 2 BIM compliant design proposals. We work closely with you, utilising information from site surveys, storage surveys and briefing sessions to fully understand your vision and requirement.

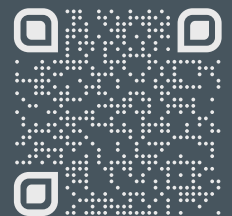

Our teams can create full interior design proposals including flooring, wall colour and graphics, acoustics, fabric, finishes and product selections to reflect the ethos and culture of your organisation. The final design will always be mindful of your current and future requirements.

To help you to visualise the design proposals, we can provide accurate visuals throughout the process. Alongside the 2D plans and mood boards, we can create 3D visuals, interactive walkthroughs, static 360° and virtual reality environments, helping you to achieve your desired design. This not only allows you to experiment and finesse the designs in real time, but gives you the opportunity to move throughout the space, testing how different areas and departments will interact and work together. This interactive design service results in functional and aesthetically pleasing offices you and your team will love to work in!
